Young Bristol Attorney Receives Appointment To Post Today

YOUNGEST TO HOLD JOB

Other Bucks County Officers Take Oath of Office Today

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 6.—(INS)—John Leslie Kilcoyne, young Bristol attorney, was appointed today as assistant district attorney of Bucks County.

Kilcoyne has been serving as assistant legal adviser to Colonel Samuel O. Wynne, prohibition administrator for Eastern Pennsylvania, but will resign from the prohibition post in order to accept the post assigned him as assistant to District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn.

Mr. Kilcoyne will be one of the youngest assistant district attorneys ever to serve in Bucks County. He is one of the youngest members of the bar in the county, being admitted in 1922. He is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, and has held the prohibition post since 1927.

In this appointment the Bristol attorney succeeds to the vacancy created by the death of Samuel B. Sullivan.

Other Bucks County officers to be sworn in today included:

Judge Hiram H. Keller, who was reelected as associate judge of the Bucks County court.

District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn.

Prothonotary, John L. High, of Dublin.

Two jury commissioners: Stacy B. Brown, of Newtown, and Kenward S. Ahlun, of Doylestown.

George S. Hotchkiss, editor of the Doylestown Intelligencer, was sworn in as chief Burgess of Doylestown, and immediately issued a statement to the farmers of the county. Mr. Hotchkiss extended a welcome to the farmers to visit Doylestown, assuring them ample free parking space and at the same time called upon the police authorities to be more courteous than ever to visitors in the city.

Injured Pushing Bicycle When Struck By Auto

Struck by an automobile when the steering gear broke, Cyrus Weikel, 40, of Langhorne, is suffering from a fractured skull and a fracture of the left ankle at the Harriman Hospital, here. Weikel, an employee of the Reading Railroad Company, had just finished his work Saturday afternoon and was pushing his bicycle along the Langhorne-Yardley Road, when Harry Bancroft, of Yardley, approached operating a small truck owned by Charles T. Eastburn. When Bancroft reached the point in the road where Weikel was walking the steering gear broke and the car swerved to the side of the road, striking the man.

A passer-by, Raymond Sands, of Langhorne, brought the injured man to the Harriman Hospital, here, where he is still being cared for.

Weikel, who is single, was enroute to his home when the accident occurred.

See and Hear Senator Grundy In the Pathe News Reel

(By "The Stroller")

Reading this striking caption in the advertisement of the Grand Theatre, Saturday, I made it a point to drop into the theatre.

Promptly at 7 o'clock the huge organ of the "Play House Beautiful" began to resound and almost before one could realize it there flashed on the screen a life-size picture of Bristol's ex-Councilman, Joseph R. Grundy, now the junior Senator from Pennsylvania.

The picture was exceptionally good and depicted our well-known townsman true to life. Instantly there came from the sound-producing machine words which in every respect sounded like the voice of Mr. Grundy. The reproduction of the voice was just as real as the picture.

It was quite an experience to sit there and have depicted before one's eyes the likeness of Mr. Grundy and to hear him speak from the screen of a movie house.

Dolores Salazar, Spanish dancer, whose $180,000 breach of promise suit against 51-year-old Ferdinand Pinney Earle, well-known artist, has been answered with a denial that the latter ever proposed marriage. Further exception is taken to the dancer's alleged declaration that Earle won her by a course of "ardent love-making and passionate letter-writing," and that he finally abandoned her in Paris. FESTIVE AIR PERVADES ROME; CITY BEDECKED

Residents Work Furiously In Making Preparations For Royal Wedding

CITY FULL OF PEOPLE

By Guglielmo Emanuel

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

ROME, Jan. 6.—With a festive air pervading the city, its residents worked furiously today to bedeck Rome in gala array for the wedding of Princess Marie Jose and Crown Prince Humbert Wednesday.

Flags and bunting were hung everywhere. Garlands of flowers were much in evidence. Colored electric bulbs were strung across many streets where street dancing in picturesque native costumes, military processions and religious ceremonies were to be held during the six day jamboree of joy which will follow the wedding.

While visiting royalty, nobles and prominent personages of Europe continued to arrive, thousands of peasants poured into the city to partake in the festivities.

The happy couple, meanwhile, spent part of the day quietly at the royal estate, Castel Porziano, outside of Rome, where a hunting party was scheduled.

INSTITUTE ACTION TO PADLOCK THREE HOTELS

Closson House Here Included In List To Be Closed By Court Order

RAIDED LAST DEC. 14

Padlock proceedings were instituted Saturday against three Bucks County hotels located in Bensalem Township, Bristol Borough and Falls Township. The action was taken by Federal and State officials to mop up this section. In all cases where padlock proceedings were started raids have been made from time to time and the alleged proprietors have refused to take warnings.

Places to be closed: Red Lion Inn, Torresdale. Hotel Closson, Bristol. Wheatstee Inn, Falls Township.

Actions were instituted, it is said, with the co-operation and assistance of District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn, of Bucks County.

Legal action to close the places as liquor dispensing resorts was started at the instance of Wilhelm F. Knauer, deputy state attorney general.

None of the establishments against which proceedings were begun have been padlocked since the advent of prohibition and the owners and proprietors against whom the suits will be pressed, Mr. Knauer asserts, in numerous instances are prohibition violators who have been forced to flee Philadelphia because of persistent raiding in that city.

Evidence against the three Bucks County places was obtained by Federal prohibition agents working under the supervision of Colonel Samuel O. Wynne, prohibition administrator, his assistant Alexander MacPhee, and State Police under Major Lynn Adams. Major Adams prepared the evidence against the three resorts.

The hotels were raided December 14th.

1 WOMAN KILLED, 1 DIES OF INJURIES AS AUTOS CRASH; 8 PERSONS INJURED AND CARS ARE BADLY DAMAGED IN COLLISIONS

Accident Near Fallsington Kills Philadelphian, Injures Seven and Four Cars Are Involved — Two Meet Head-On; Others Go Into Ditch — Aged Collingswood Resident Dies After Machine Is Overturned at Morrisville Bridge — Injured Are Held in Trenton Hospital.

Two automobile accidents in Bucks County yesterday cost the lives of two women, one being killed instantly in a head-on crash, and the other, 70 years old, dying from shock three hours after another collision. Eight persons were injured in the crashes.

Mrs. Antoinette Aversa, 35 years old, of 1420 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, died of a fracture of the skull when two automobiles came together on the Lincoln Highway near the Fallsington tunnel about 6 o'clock last night. Seven other persons were injured, five of whom are being held for treatment at McKinley Hospital, Trenton, N. J.

The other victim, Mrs. Annie Gillingham, of Collingswood, N. J., was a passenger in one of two machines that collided at the Pennsylvania entrance to the Calhoun Street bridge, at Morrisville. She suffered a dislocation and probable fracture of the shoulder and bruises in the crash, but an autopsy performed by Dr. Cohen, of the Mercer Hospital staff, after her death at that institution, revealed that shock had proved fatal.

The Other woman In Chicago Triangle.

Mrs. Dorothy Schweinfurth-Langley, of Chicago, "the other woman" in the fatal shooting of Morris Leoney, 39, by his wife, Mrs. Florence Leoney. Mrs. Leoney shot and killed her husband as an answer to his demand of "what she was going to do about his running around with Mrs. Langley," who incidentally is a cousin to Mrs. Leoney. The injured in the Fallsington accident are:

Salvatore Aversa, 40, husband of the woman who was killed, fractured collarbone and abrasions on both legs.

Mary, 10, their daughter, deep lacerations of the lower lip, and body bruises.

Marlo, aged 7, their son, badly shaken up but not otherwise hurt.

Fernand A. Aubry, of 306 East 14th Street, New York City, director of airports planning engineer of the American Airports Corporation, New York, and a former French aviator, cut on the right leg.

Mrs. Aubry, his wife, probable fracture of the right leg.

Mrs. Juliet Wells, of 23 Lexington Avenue, New York, tip of the right finger of the right hand amputated, brush burns and bruises about the head, face and legs.

Marie Walker, of 33 Claver Place, Brooklyn, New York, treated at Mercer Hospital for lacerations about an eye and both legs.

Aversa, with his family, was traveling in a sedan toward Philadelphia, while the Aubrys and Mrs. Wells, who were returning from a holiday trip to Savannah, Ga., were in the second line of cars proceeding in the opposite direction.

Just before Aversa reached the first of the line of machines coming toward him he swerved to the left side of the road in an attempt to pass a car ahead of him. As he came abreast of the machine ahead, the first automobile in the east-bound line grazed the left side of his sedan and careened off into the ditch at the side of the road.

Aversa's car then struck that of Aubry with such force that Mrs. Aversa was thrown through the windshield and landed in front of the machine. Her knees caught over the front bumper and as the cars separated her body was dragged under the one in which she had been riding.

Miss Walker and John Usher, of 219 Glove Avenue, Jamaica, N. Y., were directly behind Aubry. Usher attempted to stop, but he grazed the right side of the rear of the wrecked car, and he, too, went into the ditch.

All of the victims, except Miss Walker, were taken to McKinley Hospital in a truck by Jack Osgoodby and Jack Allen, of Asbury Park. All were treated by Dr. John McCullough, and, with the exception of Aubry, were held for observation and further treatment.

Both the Aubry and Aversa machines were wrecked, while the other two which went into the ditch were slightly damaged. Corporal Welsh and Officer Tezzent, of the Langhorne Barracks of the Pennsylvania State Highway Patrol, investigated the accident.

In the accident which resulted in the death of Mrs. Gillingham, Mrs. Winfield Cox, 63 years old, of 417 South Pennsylvania Avenue, Morrisville, a passenger in the same car, sustained fractured ribs. She is in Mercer Hospital, where it is said her condition is not serious. Her husband, who was driving, escaped injuries.

The other machine was owned and occupied by Horace T. Cook, prominent Trenton rubber manufacturer, of 159 Library Place, Princeton, and operated by Edward Davis, Negro, his chauffeur.

Cox and Davis were taken before Justice of the Peace Neal Nolan by Chief of Police Cooper and arraigned on a technical charge of manslaughter. They were held under $1,000 bail each.

Mrs. Gillingham had been spending the holiday season at the Cox home. Yesterday noon Cox decided to drive her and Mrs. Cox to Washington Crossing. They were proceeding up Delmor Avenue, and Davis was driving up Trenton Avenue when the cars crashed. The Cox machine was upset and the occupants thrown out.

Miss Yvonne Hurley, of West Trenton Avenue, Morrisville, took Mrs. Gillingham to the hospital, where she died from shock three hours later.

GROWING GREATER

The increase of 14,299,000 in the population of the United States in the decade preceding July 1, 1928, reported by the National Bureau of Economic Research, represents a healthy, natural and normal growth. There was no boom development during those 10 years, and therefore there is no inflation to cope with during the next decade.

An excess of immigrants over emigrants and of births over deaths explains this large growth. And as long as there is no race suicide in the United States and the United States remains a world favorite as a habitat the population will continue to grow.

Where is there another country, irrespective of area, that could assimilate 14,000,000 people without serious unemployment, political strife and social disorder? The ease with which America takes unto itself all comers is one of the miracles of this miraculous country.

The same bureau that furnished the above population figures has compiled some statistics on employment. Those particularly significant show that 46,580,000 persons are gainfully employed in the United States, leaving 72,726,000 to be supported by them. That is a healthy proportion, if the usually accepted average of three persons to a family holds good. On the basis of these figures there is more than one breadwinner to a family.

If idleness is the first symptom of national decay, America still enjoys the flush of health.

COOPERATION

Time and again effort has been directed to array the urban and rural elements of the United States in antagonism and to carry that antagonism into politics. Without seeking far it is possible to see evidence of a present-day effort to accomplish this very thing; congress is divided against itself with urban member opposing rural member, and city and country quarrel over the tariff, prohibition and many other questions. But there is no real cause for alarm. The future promises comity and mutual understanding.

No single factor has contributed so much to safeguard the United States against this dangerous sectionalism as easy transportation, the breaking down of the barriers of isolation, the facilitation of acquaintance and mutual understanding between city and country. The city has been going to the country, the country has been coming to see and know the city.

It is a fundamental of human nature that two groups, as mutually interdependent as are the urban and rural populations, cannot finally succeed in disliking each other if only they get to know each other, to understand each other's problems, to appreciate how much they owe and depend upon each other.

This is the most important thing that the age of petroleum and the motor car has accomplished; for it concerns the fundamentals of society, the integrity of the political and economical structure of the nation.

About the hardest things to cure are injured feelings.

The way to see the silver lining of a cloud is to stand in the sunshine far from the fellow who is under it.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

ITEMS OF INTEREST AS CLIPPED FROM NEWSPAPER FILES

John Harton, at one time County Treasurer according to a half century old issue of "The Intelligencer" of Saturday, December 29, 1879, died after a short illness. The deceased, who was very well known throughout Bucks county was a native of Ireland, but arrived in this country when a young man. He had occasion to visit Doylestown when a young man and while here filled a vacancy in the office of the "Democrat." This position became permanent and he filled it until a few days before his death. In 1871 he was elected County Treasurer.

Commenting upon the physicians about Langhorne being kept busy, the correspondent for "The Intelligencer" from Langhorne had this to say: "Langhorne though favorably located with pure air and healthful surroundings has two physicians who find considerable employment. During the past year the two doctors have visited over 500 different families."

It was also noted under the Langhorne column that James T. Newbold represented the Middletown Grange at the sessions of the State Grange.

Mice or rats gnawing the heads of matches were believed to have started a fire which fifty years ago came near destroying the residence of Evan R. Penrose, Quakertown. The fire originated near the stairway and was extinguished before much damage was done.

While E. H. Smith, Newtown, was walking on the streets of Philadelphia he had the misfortune to have a small pocketbook taken from his pocket. The purse, however, contained only a small amount of money.

At a meeting of the Borough Council of Doylestown, John K. Tomlinson was appointed to collect delinquent taxes. For his services he was to have been paid six per cent. The pay of the lamp-lighter was increased to $8 per month for January, February, March and April.

George Lear and George Ross, members of the Constitutional Convention from Bucks County attended the annual reunion held in Philadelphia fifty years ago. Mr. Lear also received an invitation to attend the reception to be given General U. S. Grant in Philadelphia.

H. S. Shaddinger, formerly of Point Pleasant was a visitor in Doylestown after an absence of many years. When a young man he went to Illinois and during the Civil War he served in the regular army, made the memorable campaign through Georgia with General Sherman, was captured and imprisoned in the South and was finally discharged at the termination of his enlistment. Mr. Shaddinger commented quite freely upon the many changes made in and about Doylestown during his absence.

Bucks county was quite well represented at the reception given General Grant in Philadelphia. At the Doylestown station 121 special tickets were sold. The Newtown station reported having sold 152 special tickets to Philadelphia, and Langhorne sold 175 special tickets. It was estimated that several thousand Bucks county residents attended the reception.

Mrs. George Keaton is on the sick list.

Tomorrow evening Miss Myrtle Edly will entertain members of the "Penny Pals" sewing class at her Lincoln avenue home.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Reetz have moved from McKinley street to the house of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Doron, Main street.

Over $15 was realized at the bake sale which the M. E. Epworth League conducted on Saturday afternoon. Members are desirous of expressing appreciation to those who assisted with donations and purchases, as well as to Samuel J. Hilck for use of space in his business establishment.

Automobiles will leave corner of Main and Hulme streets Friday evening at 7:45 for Tretoev, transporting those who desire to attend the bi-monthly rally of the Bristol Group Epworth League.

Short Talk By A Grateful Mother
A California (Pomona) Mother speaks: "Only a mother who has passed through anxious hours of fear of croup can appreciate our feeling of gratitude toward Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. The very first doses stopped Baby's dreadful hoarse croupy cough, and to our great relief he dropped into a quiet sleep. Since then we have many times proven its worth for coughs and colds." "Say It With Songs"

Copyright, 1929, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

This novel is based on the Warner Bros. & Vitaphone picture starring Al Jolson; Darryl Francis Zanuck and Harvey Gates, Scenarists.

CHAPTER I

"This is station Q. R. S. A., the Voice of the City, on the air twenty-four hours of the day. We are now about to give you the correct time." The radio announcer turned in his chair and glanced at the standard timepiece hanging on the wall above his head. "When you hear the chimes it will be exactly ten thirty-one by the beautiful Guggenblosser Swiss watch that I have in my hand." He looked again at the clock on the wall, and then struck two silvery notes on the little song which he held before the microphone. "It is now exactly thirty-one minutes past ten o'clock. The correct time is brought to you through this station each half hour by the courtesy of Max Guggenblosser, manufacturer of fine watches. This little watch I have here sells for three dollars, and can be purchased for only one dollar down."

"One bright an' guiding light... Tha-hat ta-haught me wrong from 't-hight... I found in mah-by mah-hothers eyes-s-s..."

The girl stepped aside, allowing the announcer to take her place before the "micro," and drew a lipstick from the bag she carried in her arm. She held the purse up in front of her face, scanning her features in the small mirror and applied the make-up.

"Wanted onna phone, Miss La Marr." A uniformed boy pushed open the soundproof door and beckoned to the singer.

"Thanks, kid." The girl adjusted her hat, thrust a stick of chewing gum into her mouth, and waved to the announcer who had already switched the microphone over to the station announcer. "See ya next week, big boy!" she called airily and departed.

"I want to bring home this message to all lovers of beauty. The secret of your good looks lies in the care of your complexion." An angular woman of some fifty years thrust a lock of straggling gray hair back from her sallow face and settled herself more firmly in the swivel chair before the desk on which rested a microphone. "The use of the correct facial creams..." She paused, consulting the manuscript in her hand, and continued...

... will bring out the hidden loveliness that is the desire of each of us. We will begin..."

...and now, boys and girls, we are going to hear little Virgie Smithers sing the song that she learned this week. I hope you are all listening in, because little Virgie learned this song especially for the Child Happiness Hour kiddies. Little Virgie is just five years old. We're ready, Virgie. Little birdie... that's right..."

The long corridors of the Q. R. S. A. broadcasting station were hushed and silent, save for the thin, muted strains of jazz that crept stealthily even from behind the rows of soundproof doors that opened in orderly file onto the hallways. Footfalls sank into thick, heavy carpets, leaving no trace of their passing. Now and again as a door opened or closed a blast of music, a monotone of words, a fragment of a song, burst momentarily upon the silence and then was gone. Silence and sound. Silence that would be carried through the air across continents, distributed and redistributed to millions of listening ears.

In the big reception room visitors waited expectantly to be shown through the broadcasting studios. Artists of all descriptions came and went, beginning work, finishing work, looking for work. Business men rushed in and out, arranging to suggestions for entertainment.

Continuity writers hurried back and forth, scripts in hand, conferring over "hours" written and about to be written. Little red lights flashed continually on the board in front of the telephone operator caged off in a corner of the room. Messenover to the desk. "The company says they're going to cancel their hour. And that's one of our best accounts. They say they're not getting enough letters. They don't think radio advertising is effective any more." The advertising manager's brow puckered in a frown.

"I'll fix that," Phillips pressed a button at the side of his desk. "Take this, Miss Wilson," he began as his secretary entered silently, notebook and pencil in hand. "To all of our employees," he dictated.

"Without fail, every member of the staff must have five of his friends write letters tonight to the White-wash Soap Company—look up the address in the files and add—telling how they started using their soap after listening to their Marimba Band over Station Q. R. S. A. Sign that: Arthur Phillips, General Manager."

The telephone bell buzzed softly. Phillips picked up the receiver. "Yes," he answered. "All right, I'll be right out."

He rose to his feet and walked with the advertising manager to the door. "See you later, Bill." He clapped the man on the back, opened the door, and stepped out to meet two elderly gentlemen who stood gazing about the outer office.

"Mr. Phillips, I'm George Swanson of the Excelsior Automobile Agency." The small, white haired man extended his card. "And this is Vernon Jones, my partner."

Phillips took the card, looked at it, and put it into his vest pocket. "How do you do, Mr. Swanson. Mr. Jones." He shook hands with both men. "Glad to see you. What can I do for you?"

"We came to talk to you about the talent you've been using on our radio hour," Swanson began. He was very short, and he had to look up at Phillips when he talked to him. "That singer you've been giving us has tonsils, or something."

"And that fellow talking about accident insurance on the hour just after us," Jones, a lean, gray haired man, put in. "All he talks about is how many chances you take of getting killed every time you go out for a little ride. That don't help us sell autos."

Phillips smiled, a friendly, disarming smile that showed two rows of even, white teeth. "No, I'll say it doesn't," he agreed. "We'll see what we can do about this."

"We want somebody else on our hour," Swanson insisted. "Somebody with personality. Somebody that'll make 'em want to go for a joy ride—not for a trip in a hearse."

"Sure," Phillips nodded. "Now listen! I'll fix you up, gentlemen. I've got a great idea. Just the very thing for you." His brown eyes flashed. "I'll give you Joe Lane as your program. I couldn't do more than that. He'll pep things up for you."

ABRAHAM LINCOLN The Straight Thinker

He said this: "Property is the fruit of labor; property is desirable; it is a positive good in the world. That some should be rich shows that others may become rich, and hence is an encouragement to industry and enterprise. Let not him who is houseless pull down the house of another, let him work diligently and build one for himself, thus by example assuring that his own shall be safe from violence when built."

Many people, who have thrift accounts with us, are acting on this very principle.

Many who wanted homes, got them by the industry and enterprise that Lincoln speaks of. Got them, also, because our plan of home ownership was practical and convenient.

New Beauty

FOR THE NEW FORD

THE NEW FORD COUPE

Flowing grace of line gives style and distinction to new, roomy Ford bodies. Now on display at dealers' showrooms

THE NEW FORD CARS, shown last Tuesday for the first time, have been enthusiastically received throughout the country. Everywhere it is realized that now, more than ever, the new Ford is a "value far above the price."

One of the distinguishing features of the new Ford bodies is the carefully planned harmony of every detail of design. From the new deep radiator to the tip of the curving rear fender there is an unbroken sweep of line—a flowing grace of contour heretofore thought possible only in an expensive automobile.

LOOKING at the new Ford you are impressed instantly by its smart style and compact, substantial sturdiness. For there is about it a certain character or personality which sets it apart and gives it a fresh and lasting beauty. You will take a real pride in this beauty just as you find a real thrill in the alert, capable performance of the car.

All of the new Ford bodies are finished in a variety of colors, with new striping and new streamline moulding. Interiors have more leg room. Closed cars have adjustable front seats. The smaller wheels, with larger tires, bring the car closer to the road, with a consequent gain in riding comfort and safety.

An additional feature of importance is the Rustless Steel used for the radiator shell, head lamps, hub caps, cowl finish strip and tail lamp.

This Rustless Steel will retain its bright, gleaming luster throughout the life of the car. It will not corrode, rust or tarnish in any kind of weather. Its brilliance is permanent. There is no plate to wear off, crack or scale, for it is the same bright metal all the way through.

The use of this Rustless Steel on the new Ford is a reflection of the enduring quality that has been built into every part of the car.

AT today's low prices the new Ford is unquestionably an outstanding value. Check it over feature by feature and you will see that it brings you everything you want or need in a modern automobile:—beauty of line and color . . . safety . . . comfort . . . speed . . . power . . . quick acceleration . . . ease of control . . . economy of operation . . . low up-keep cost . . . typical Ford reliability and long life.
